MANY ENJOY FIRST DANCE AT THE UNION

Event Surpasses Informals of Other Years
EXCELLENT MUSIC
House Committee to Be Congratulated for Plans

The first informal dance of the year held last night at the Union was a decided success both as to numbers and to the good time which everyone shared. Music, decorations, and refreshments left little to be desired. The ball room was simply but appropriately decorated with McGill colors and the great variety of costumes added brilliancy to the scene. The music, supplied by the McGill Dance Orchestra, equalled, if not surpassed, its usual excellence.

After the sixth dance delicious refreshments were served at the first sitting, and then the dancing began again with even greater zest than before. The second sitting was held later, and the close of the enjoyable evening came all too soon.

The patronesses and their escorts were as follows: Mrs. Gordon Laing and G. B. Puddicombe, Miss Horibatt and B. C. Rochester, and Mrs. Ernest Brown and N. G. Willoughby.

The following ladies were present at the function: the Misses Miller, I. Larkin, Heyward, M. Cliff, W. Kastello, L. Prenovau, A. Fickler, S. Park, Macmillan, Elenor Powell, Thelma Rough, Louise Fair, Kathleen Howard, Stella Byrne, Glynne Howard, Elaine Dubord, Audrey Taylor, Margaret Ewing, C. A. Miller, R. E. Ostrander, Ewing, M. DONATION TOWARDS LEROY SCHOLARSHIP

Contribution from Distinguished Graduate, Dr. Ami

Mr. A. P. S. Glasco, the university secretary and bursar, has received a contribution of $100 toward the LeRoy Scholarship in geology. The donation was generously given by Dr. Henri Marc Ami, D.Sc., F.G.S., F.R.S.C., F.R.G.S., F.R.C.I., the well known Canadian geologist.

Dr. Ami is a graduate of McGill, having studied geology under Sir William Dawson, graduating in Arts in '82 and obtaining his M.A. in '85. He took his D.Sc. at Queen's in '92 and at McGill in '07. He is a prominent member of the Ottawa Valley branch of the McGill Graduates' Society. Until his retirement in 1912, he was geologist and palaeontologist to the Geological Survey of Canada. During the Great War he was attached to the British Embassy in Washington in charge of war metals and minerals.

The LeRoy Scholarship was founded in memory of Capt. Osmond E. LeRoy (Arts '95), who was killed in the battle of Passchendaele in October, 1917. It is awarded annually by the head of the department of geology and mineralogy in consultation with the principal to some worthy student who desires to proceed to post-graduate studies in geology at McGill University. The recipient becomes an officer of instruction of the Faculty of Applied Science. The present capital of the fund is about $11,550, providing a scholarship of about $700. The present holder is A. W. Carlyle, B.Sc.

Annual Board Awards Picture Contract

JUNIOR LEVY

Biography Forms Printed During Course of Week

As a result of the inquiries of the Annual's business manager, F. T. Collins, B.A., Law '24, Notman's contract for photographs will be accepted by the Board. The well known photograph firm will be in a position to hold three sittings per week, namely on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings for at least ten men per hour. Class presidents of the various junior years and the heads of all clubs and societies are asked to get in touch immediately with Collins at Westmount 5890 to arrange for picture sittings. Owing to the large number of photographs it is essential that a start be made on Wednesday next.

Biography forms are to be printed and distributed during the course of next week, and an effort will be made to have pictures and biographies finished before the end of November. The Board alone cannot accomplish this. The continued help of all juniors is most necessary as without their steady co-operation the Annual Board is bound hand and foot.

A levy of fifty cents, as has been the custom for years, is being collected from each junior to form a fund for current expenses. The Annual cannot start without money. A bank account will be opened next week. While nothing definite has yet been decided with the question of advertising, the Board has a novel plan in view, which it is hoped will be feasible. A full meeting of the Annual Board is scheduled for Tuesday, November 7, in the Union Library, which will serve as headquarters. The editor-in-chief would like all members to be present at the second regular meeting of the Board.

STUDENT BODY TO GREET SIMS

An Impressive Convocation Ceremony on Nov. 10

On Friday next, November 10th, Admiral W. S. Sims, G.C.M.G., will come to McGill to receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. This very distinguished sailor and firm friend of the British people, will address the student body, and no one should fail to attend the special convocation in the Royal Victoria College. The Principal, Sir Arthur W. Currie, will confer the degree, and will also address the gathering.

The Glee Club and the Mandolin Club will be present to supply the musical part of the programme, and to lead the students in Canadian, American and McGill songs. As a special feature the U. S. Navy yell will be given. All students should take this opportunity to hear Admiral Sims, and the new-comers to McGill will have the added opportunity of seeing a Convocation and extending their greeting to the eminent visitor.

McGILL HEARS OF STUDENTS IN FAR EAST

Fletcher Brockman Spoke at Hall

CHINESE LIFE

New Status of Christianity in Recent Years

Before a small but keenly attentive gathering of students at Strathcona Hall yesterday afternoon, Mr Fletcher Brockman, a leader in the international movement of the Y.M.C.A., gave an intensely absorbing, though rather rambling discourse concerning his experience with Chinese student life. The lecturer, having been introduced by Mr. McKay, the house secretary, made clear to his audience that he had come to the meeting absolutely unprepared to give a concrete, well-connected discussion of the subject, since he was but shortly informed of the engagement. He skillfully engaged his hearers, however, with a number of brief, illuminating and somewhat amusing episodes and personal reminiscences of his 25 years' sojourn among the scholars of the Far East. During the whole of this time he has lived in the closest contact with the Oriental students, and has gained a consummate acquaintance with their mode of life, activities, studies and notions of western civilization.

Formerly, missionaries, teachers and such occidentals who interested themselves in the East, experienced the greatest difficulty and opposition in initiating the Chinese into the clear beauty of life, activities, studies and notions of western civilization. Formerly, missionaries, teachers and The students, particularly, were suspicious of the foreign beliefs, and, moreover, stoutly refused to be influenced by them.

They showed only a glimmering interest in science and the primary experiments in physics completely absorbed them. The missionaries played upon this interest to introduce the definite object for which they had come. But their attempts were futile, the scholars still contented themselves with ethics, poetry and ancient historical legends.

After the Russo-Japanese war, conditions became reversed. The Chinese perceived that western culture had empowered Japan to defeat Russia, and to raise herself to a proud position among the nations. They determined that China must become modern if her ancient dignity and civilization were to suffer no decline. Then followed an immense exodus to foreign universities, mostly to those of Japan, although some few wandered as far as America, and even England.

PHYSIOLOGICAL SOCIETY TO MEET

D. S. Forster Speaks on Pasteur

The Physiological Society will hold its second meeting of the session on Tuesday, Nov. 7, in the New Biological Building, at 8.15 p.m. The speaker of the evening, D. S. Forster, M.A., will discuss the work of Pasteur. Although the name of Pasteur is familiar to everyone, the exact nature of his accomplishments are not so well known as their importance would justify. Medical students in particular should be interested in the work of this great chemist, the value of whose assistance to the medical profession in understanding and combating disease cannot be over-estimated. Friends of the Society, whether members or not, will be heartily welcomed.

With regard to the business of the evening, the Society will elect a vice-president and one member of the library committee. The library of the Society is at the disposal of its members for the borrowing and returning of books on Mondays, from 4 to 5 p.m., and on Thursdays from 12 to 1 p.m. A considerable number of members have already exercised the privilege of consulting this excellent collection of books.

STUDENTS' TICKETS FOR ARLESS GAME

Students' tickets for the Allan Arless Memorial Game to be played at the Molson Stadium on Thanksgiving Day may be bought at the Union Tuck Shop or the Union office wicket for one dollar.

Book Ends For The Library

If you are fond of books, or if you wish to choose a gift for a booklover, you will be interested in the many styles of book ends that are to be found at Mappin's. Some of them are of classical design—such as the Discus Thrower—others represent animals of various kinds. Finished in rich bronze and antique gold, they are just the right weight to serve their purpose.

If you want to choose a gift that is a little out of the ordinary, may we suggest a set of book ends.

We will be pleased to have you come in and look them over.

MONTREAL, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1922.

THANKSGIVING DAY.

Thanksgiving Day is particularly welcome to the student body as one of the few respites, in fact the last, between the commencement of college and the Christmas vacation. Many of those whose homes are not far distant have already departed, while there will be a further exodus over the week-end to enjoy the time-honoured Thanksgiving dinner. Non-resident students remaining in town will be offered a special dinner by the Ladies' Auxiliary of Strathcona Hall.

With international controversies developing over-night, the world of today is continuously faced with critical problems. The fact that a conflict, which might have involved many of the belligerents of the late war, was narrowly averted but a few weeks ago is ample reason for heartfelt thanksgiving for at least temporary deliverance from the grim spectre of bloodshed.

Although by no means in the most desirable condition, Canada is without doubt one of the fortunate nations of the moment. Bountiful crops were gathered in the nine provinces last summer. Unemployment, never so serious in the Dominion as in other parts of the Empire, has practically disappeared. Strikes and labour agitation are uncommon. The commercial stagnancy prevalent for some two years is gradually leaving the country, and "the man in the street" declares that the year 1923 will bring prosperous times. A federal government which has been judicious in policy hold the reins of office, while the Province of Quebec is in an excellent position economically.

In this student world of ours, we reach Thanksgiving Day equipped with a new Biological Building, strengthened with additions to the university staff, and with registration figures substantially higher than those of last year, although dormitories and an up-to-date gymnasium are still but dreams of the future. Defeated on gridiron, we have yet secured track and tennis intercollegiate championships, and have at least these trophies for which to be thankful, and by noon today we hope also the harrier run. Let us think of the thousands of European students who are scarcely able to eke out a mere existence. Let us celebrate Thanksgiving Day with grateful hearts to the Almighty for His countless gifts, and return refreshed to McGill to carry on until the happy Yuletide season.

A NOVEL PROPOSITION.

The following remarks, found in the editorial column of the Queen's Journal of last Tuesday, scarcely require comment. The idea is so emphatically original, and takes for granted such magnanimity on the part of Varsity and McGill, were their finances in a condition to permit of the distribution of receipts suggested, that it leaves the reader complimented, but bereft of reply. We append the financial statement of the McGill Rugby Club to convince the sponsors of the notion that, were McGill willing thus to assist our sister college, she is in fact unable. We attach the editorial in full:

"In Principal Taylor's speech at the Queen's Alumni Dinner, at the King Edward after the game, he drew attention to the necessity of some more equitable division of gate receipts. As anyone who considers the matter will see, Queen's, while she is under the same expense in regard to putting a team in the field receives only a small fraction of that which goes to McGill and Varsity in the matter of gate receipts, due to the relatively small population on which she can draw for her home games. While there are certain handicaps which are inevitable and which she cheerfully accepts as incident to her size and position, it would seem that where the disadvantage is more or less artificial something might be done to remedy it. The graduates and under-graduates of our sister universities delight to tell us how much they have sympathized with Queen's in her defeats, how they admire her sportsmanship in staying in the intercollegiate trio for so long in the face of those defeats, thus making it possible to have real three-cornered competition, and how strong is their feeling of good will toward us generally. It would seem that an opportunity for more practical and concrete proof of this goodwill is in order."

LADIES' AUXILIARY GIVE FINE DINNER

Thanksgiving Meal for Non-Montrealers

Students from parts of the world distant from Montreal, who will be unable to spend Thanksgiving with their friends or at their homes, are assured of at least one part of the traditional Thanksgiving programme, without money and without price, namely a good substantial and satisfying dinner, at Strathcona Hall, at 6.30 p.m. The Ladies' Auxiliary of the S. C. A., are the hostesses, as they have been for many years on similar occasions. Out of town students who have passed their first year at McGill can testify to the generosity of their hospitality.

At the dinner on Monday next, Mr. W. M. Birks, President of the Montreal Board of Trade, will give an address on impressions of Canada, gathered on his recent trip with the Board of Trade across the Dominion. As the audience will be composed of students representing practically every part of Canada outside of Montreal, the subject seems a peculiarly appropriate one. The speaker, Mr. Birks, is a well known figure in Montreal, a governor of the University, and one of its most loyal supporters.

A musical programme has also been arranged in which the Glee Club, or a part of it, will share, as well as some instrumentalists of reputation in the college. Every effort will be made to assure that the programme will be not only profitable, but thoroughly enjoyable. No out-of-town student should eat his dinner in loneliness and isolation when he may share in the fellowship at the Hall by calling for his ticket.

CORRESPONDENCE

The Daily is not responsible for the sentiments of letters published in the correspondence columns. Signed communications from graduates, undergraduates and members of the faculties will be placed in print if they are not of too great length.

Correspondents are requested to observe the unwritten law of the newspaper office—that they write upon ONE SIDE of the paper ONLY.

The Editor, McGill Daily.

Sir—I noted with some surprise a letter to you which appeared in yesterday's Daily signed by "Inquisitive" which presumed to take to task the executive of the Canadian Club. It appears to me that the inquisitive individual is possibly premature in his remarks. His tone is unnecessarily sarcastic. You probably noted the letter written by R. K. Jones, now president of the Canadian Club, in one of the final issues of the Daily last spring in which he pointed out that it seemed essential that an executive of the Canadian Club should be chosen then in order to allow sufficient time during the summer to obtain speakers of ample merit to address the Canadian Club for the ensuing year. The last year's executive evidently refused to call the necessary meeting. Two weeks ago the new executive was chosen. The time has not yet come when it is either politic or polite to accuse the executive of inactivity. I am convinced that if it is possible to revive the Canadian Club the present executive is highly qualified to do so. Permit me to advise "Inquisitive" to let time tell.

FAIR PLAY.

McNaughton, of Chesterfield, Ont., uncles and aunts, Mr. and Mrs. D. Williams, of Montreal West, Mr. Norman and Miss Marie Williams, and Miss Gwytha McNaughton, cousins. Many friends from Waterville, Sherbrooke and other places were among those who showed their deep sympathy for the bereaved family by their presence.

Among the numerous and beautiful floral offerings were wreaths and sprays from the deceased's classmates, Arts '23, McGill University, Columbia Club, and Historical Club, McGill, Waterville Golf Club, Miss Kincaid, of the Royal Victoria Hospital, and many others from friends in Waterville, Coaticook and Montreal.

The late Hubert Francis Riley Holtham was born in Coaticook on December 28th, 1902, and lived in Waterville from childhood, attending school there. He matriculated at Coaticook Academy and entered McGill University in 1919. He was perusing an honor course in history, and had entered his fourth year in Arts, preparing himself for a Law course. He was a member of the Columbian, the Eastern Townships, the Historical, the Old Scouts and the Economics Clubs of McGill, and a member of the Waterville Golf Club. A general favorite with his classmates, and in sports, Mr. Holtham was a young man who set an example of good-fellowship, as well as attention to study, that will leave its mark on the lives of those who enjoyed his friendship, and his early death will leave a gap that will be hard to fill.

It was not only in his school and college life that Hubert Holtham proved himself a "manly man," for he was a son of whom parents could well be proud, and one who loved the wholesome and simple outdoor life, which was usually spent with his family at Perkin's Point, Lake Massawippi, and at Waterville, his boyhood's home, during the summer vacations.

Mr. and Mrs. Holtham and only brother, Bartley, have the deep sympathy of a large circle of friends in their great loss.

The world is old and yet it likes to laugh.

New jokes are hard to find. A whole new editorial staff. Can't tickle every mind. So if you meet some ancient joke. Dressed up in modern guise, Don't frown and call the thing a fake, Just laugh—don't be too wise.

QUEENS SET FOR BATTLE WITH MCGILL

Red and White Meets Tricolor in Kingston Today

Cope Out of Game With an injury to Leg

A determined band of 20 McGill riders iron warriors left the Grand Trunk Station at 11 o'clock last night for Kingston, where they will battle the Queen's team, this afternoon, in their final intercollegiate match of the season, as well as the last contest in which the Red and White will engage this year on Canadian territory.

"Old Man Jim" has again made his weekly visit to the McGill camp. This time he has selected Campbell Cope as the "goat." Cope injured his leg in Wednesday's workout at the Stadium, and though the injury at first seemed slight it later appeared that it was more serious than had been expected, and Coach Shaughnessy was obliged to leave the diminutive flying wing in Montreal over the week-end. It is, however, expected that he will be back in condition in time to make the trip to Syracuse next week. Flanagan is still nursing an injured ankle, and did not accompany the squad.

The line-up of the team that will oppose the Presbyterians this afternoon was announced last night by Coach Shaughnessy, as follows:—

Half-backs—Little, Carroll and Crain, with Walsh and Grassick as spares.

Quarter-back—"Don" Baillie.

Flying wing—Newton, with Cummings as spare.

Outside wings—Robertson and Murphy, with Fife and Abinovich spares.

Middles—Ambridge and Manson.

Insides—Foss and Woodruff, with Wilson and Gamble as spares.

Centre—McGregor, with Smith as spare.

The Queens team will take the field this afternoon with full strength. They have a powerful backfield in Leadley, Batstone, Harding and Evans, and one that is dangerous in any style of play. "Bud" Thomas and Walker are an invincible pair of outside wings, but on the line the McGill men should have a slight advantage over their rivals. The tri-color is, of course, the favorite to come through victorious, but they will have to earn their victory. They will oppose a team that will fight hard for every inch of ground, and will not give up until the final whistle has been blown.

The team is anxious to atone for the defeats they have suffered to date in the intercollegiate contests, and will do their best to wind up the season in satisfactory fashion. The Queens players, knowing the traditional McGill fighting spirit, are not allowing self-confidence to take hold of them. They are looking for a hard battle, and are prepared to meet it. If the Red and White can hold down the Leadley-Batstone combination, there may be a pleasant surprise in store for football fans.

HORATIUS AND OTHERS

We admire the deeds of Horatius the brave,
How he guarded the bridge from the foe;
With a friend on each side, he resisted and saved
All his people from imminent woe.
And we marvel to read all about the brave deeds
Of the Spartans who stood at the pass;
How they died one by one, when their duty was done
To their country and Leonidas.

We have thrilled at the feats of the strong Hercules,
Though we know that most parts are untrue;
And we likewise admire the bold Ulysses,
And Achilles, the chivalrous, too.
We rejoice when we hear of the knights without fear,
Whom King Arthur led forth to the fray;
But these legends are real in the fact that we feel
We'll become a big hero some day.

It is true, nowadays, that such heroes are rare,
Yet there's one whom McGill recommends
To be placed by their side in posterity's glare,
One who played for McGill, with a heart and a will,
For his College, its glory and name;
One who never gave in, who was out there to win,
No matter what odds on the game.

In the days that must come, let the story be told,
Of this chivalrous star of the field,
Who resisted the foe like the dauntless of old,
Till exhaustion compelled him to yield;
While the stands rocked and dinned—
"What's the matter with Flin?"
His example the students enthralled,
We may write more name on the tablet of fame,
"Cyril Flanagan—gamest of all!"

HARRIER MEN COMPETE FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

R.M.C., 'Varsity and McGill Meet at Stadium Today

ELEVEN A.M.

Kerr, Stephen, Legg, Wiggins & Egerton for McGill

Feeling fit and full of confidence, the Toronto Harrier quintette arrived in Montreal last night in preparation for the Intercollegiate Harrier Meet to be held from the Stadium at 11 o'clock this morning, when representatives from R. M. C. and McGill will vie with each other to rob 'Varsity of the right to the championship which she has held for the past year.

The Toronto team has few marks of last year's material. McAuliffe and Leigh, who won first and second places in the race at Kingston in 1921, are not present. In Bell and Goforth the 'Varsity runners have great confidence.

The R.M.C. has also a formidable line-up of new and senior Marathoners who have been going through thorough workouts for several weeks.

The fifteen runners will line up on the Stadium at 11 o'clock sharp, and after making half a lap on the track will start on their hilly climb of Pine avenue and up the Redpath serpentine.

The finish of the race will be at the starting place, approximately at 11.45, and if the results are anything like what are expected, keen competition will be in evidence as the members of the three colleges wind up the meet.

Since Queen's have decided not to enter a team the line-up for this morning will be as follows:—

Toronto—Goforth, Bell Shaver, Curtin and Smith.

R. M. C.—Pritchard, LeBoutellier, Harris, Nelson and Creighton.

McGill—Stephen, Legg, Egerton, Kerr and Wiggins.

The officials will include: Sir Arthur Currie, Dr. Cyrus Macmillan, Dr. C. Sullivan, Coach Van Wagner, R. L. Hamilton and W. S. Antliff.

NEED VOLUNTEERS FOR PUSH-BALL

McGill Men Asked to Aid Arless Game

McGill students, in order to add to the success of the Allan Arless Memorial game at the Stadium on Monday, will stage a push-ball contest during half-time. One hundred students are required, and every volunteer will be given the opportunity of purchasing at the Union a ticket for half the nominal price. Desirable seats, offered for sale at the ridiculously low sum of one dollar, will be reserved for those taking part. It is suggested that the participants wear their oldest clothing—the game is rumored to be just the least bit strenuous. The men are requested to gather on the Campus at 1.45 p.m. Such old favorites as Davis, Harding and McCullough will be in charge.

MCGILL HEARS OF STUDENT IN FAR EAST

In Tokio, especially, the Y.M.C.A. built temporary structures for the new students, and enticed them with the ideals that the organization represented. The result was that after the Chinese revolution the students returned home absolutely certain that China must be a republic, and furthermore, every Chinese city must have its "Y" whether the local directors were Christians or not.

The Chinese renaissance has suffered some changes in the last two years; at first it merely took the form of a campaign for a more simple language and the following of western thought. Now the phase has become a desire for an intellectual life heavily tinged with European athletic tendencies and an utter disregard for the teachings of Confucius. In short, vague misconceptions of western ideals are disturbing the student life of China.

VARSITY AND MCGILL PLAY ENGLISH RUGBY

Deciding Game at Stadium Today

McGill and Varsity meet to-day at 2.15 p.m. at the Percival Molson Stadium to decide the Intercollegiate English Rugby Championship.

The game should be extremely interesting, and the teams well matched.

McGill team is as follows: Full back—A. N. McLeod. Three-quarters—Marpole, H. C. D. Cooper, MacNamee MacDonald.

Halves—J. R. Cooper and Holman. Forwards—G. Wilson, Walter, K. Patterson, Brown, Cleland, Lochhead, McGoun, O'Brien.

Reserves—MacAvity, Wise, Taylor and Neronatos.

The game will be refereed by Mr. Gunn, of the Montreal English Rugby Football Club.

At 6.30 o'clock a dinner for the two teams is being given at the Union by the Students' Council.

GAMBLING

Despite the efforts of conference athletic associations and universities to stop it, betting on football games has continued among students in support of opposing teams. Morally, such gambling undoubtedly exerts somewhat of a debasing influence upon the students involved, but even a deeper issue than that presents itself to those who oppose that form of supposed loyalty which causes men to back their team with money.

During the past few years universities have grown enormously. Consequently, although students may desire to be only a few dollars each on a game, the aggregate sum to be placed reaches into the twenties and fifties of thousands. If the individual student wins for the next few days, and if he loses, it comes out of the luxuries he intended to afford himself during the coming month. And in losing he thinks his money has gone to some other student. But this is not the case.

With the aggregate sums bet on football games mounting up to such a high figure, the proposition of betting has become exceedingly attractive to professional gamblers, men who make their living by gambling. These are the men who haunt pool rooms on the day of a game and offer to bet thousands of dollars upon the outcome of the contest. They are the men who stand on chairs in hotel lobbies, and appealing to the falsely-termed loyalties of team backers, venture to cover any amount of money which may be put up on the other side of a certain bet. It is not with students that students bet, but with professional gamblers whose entire careers of experience in gambling give them a keener insight in making their wagers.

And few have ever accused gamblers of particular scrupulousness. Unless measures are taken to curb the activities of these men, college football may some day in the not-far-distant future face a scandal as bad if not worse than that which almost overthrew organized baseball three years ago. College football players have in certain instances already been offered immense bribes by individuals whose interests demanded the loss of a contest. So far as is known, college athletes have proved themselves above such methods. But if conditions continue as they are, some day will see a set of circumstances favorable to the success of this temptation, and then the crash will come.

Betting, at best, is undesirable. It does not evidence loyalty, and in fact tends to destroy the true spirit of friendly rivalry which should exist in intercollegiate athletics. But if students must bet, it is to their best interests to see that their money is not placed against professional sharpers who contribute only to the ultimate destruction of the sport. The men with big money must be avoided and forced out of college athletics.

CO-EDS FORCED TO WEAR GREEN CAPS ON CAMPUS

"Green isn't becoming to me," wails the poor freshman co-ed of the Louisiana State University.

"It matters not; wear it!" commands the merciless and not to be defied upper class woman, and on goes the new cap that the freshman women of that university of the south must wear on the campus. Failure to comply with this rule means that Miss Freshie will have her hair plaited, regardless of whether it's bobbed or not.

Further evidence that green is the favorite color for freshman headgear is shown by the fact that the frosh of the Utah Agricultural college are also obliged to wear caps of verdant hue.

The University of Wisconsin freshman goes further and mixes red stripes with the green of his hat which is built like the "beanies" of the U.S. navy. A colored button on the top of the crown indicates the college to which the man belongs—engineers wear a purple button, agricultural students have brown buttons, letters and science students wear buttons of yellow hue, and commerce freshmen have white ones.—"Daily Californian."

LAW '24 WINS FROM MEDS. '28

Batshaw Was the Outstanding Player

A very fast and exciting indoor baseball game was played last evening by Law '24 and Med. '28, the former winning by a score of 18-5, showed their superiority throughout the whole game.

The Law students started from the beginning to use their club by hitting their opponents' pitcher with much ease. Batshaw was their outstanding player. Besides hitting at a perfect average he made many sensational catches which were appreciated in the time of danger. Lidstone's pitching was perfect, while Mendelsohn caught equally as well.

For the losers Landry played a good game. They attempted a rally in the second innings but all was frustrated when Batshaw saved the situation.

The line-up of the teams and the score by innings follow:

Law '24—Pidstone, pitcher; Mendelsohn, catcher; Bourke, 1st base; Martin, 2nd base; Eckenburg, 3rd base; Usher, ss.; Batshaw, l.f.; Macklaer, r.f. Med. '28—Harris, pitcher; Spiegel, catcher; McKinnon, 1st base; Landry, 2nd base; Mancher, 3rd base; Kathron, ss.; Saibiel, l.f.; Dujat, c.f.; Astrop, c.f. Law '244 0 4 5 5—18 Med. '280 2 1 2 0—5

LASALLE WAS DEFEATED BY SECOND TEAM

Final Score of 4-3 Result of Close Game

LASALLE TANK

Players Show General Improvement in Team Work

The intermediate polo team won their second game of the season by defeating Lasalle in a fast game at the Lasalle tank in Verdun last night. The play was very fast, and many shots were tried by both teams most of which went wild. Although the play was fast, the swimming was slow on both sides, the play consisting mostly of passing the ball. The play went from one side of the tank to the other, neither team succeeding in keeping the ball near their opponents' goal. There were several exciting scrimmages during the game, which were cleared without either team gaining a decided advantage over the other. Vickerson, Forsythe and Jardine played a very good game for McGill. Jardine is a new man at the game, and his showing last in goals was very creditable. Urquhart, Drummond and Brooks were the mainstays of the Lasalle team, Brooks doing all the scoring for his team. The McGill team used a criss-cross play when ahead in the latter part of the game in the deep end to save time.

The McGill men were in fine condition, having gone through an hour's or so walking exercise tramping around Verdun looking for the Club. They nearly mistook the canal in one case, and a field in another for the tank.

In the first quarter Lasalle got the ball, which was secured by Vickerson, who shot from centre and missed. The ball travelled from one side to another, when Lasalle secured the ball at centre and shot wild. Brooks shot wild. Goal-keeper's ball. Urquhart secured and shot wild. Scrimmage near Lasalle goal. Vickerson shot from side and scored. McGill secured ball and shot wild from centre. Moore shot yards out. Turner stopped fast shot from side by Moore. Jardine stopped fast shot from centre at end of quarter. Score, McGill, 1; Lasalle, 0.

Second quarter. Ball secured by Lasalle, who shot wild from centre. Brooks shot at McGill goal from centre. Moore shot for McGill. Urquhart shot wild at McGill. Drummond shot hard from centre, Jardine saved. Scrimmage at centre. Brooks shot yards from goal. Jardine stops ball shot from few yards from goal. Both sides shot several times unsuccessfully. Moore and Kyle had an interesting wrestle at Lasalle defence. Lasalle shot wild. At end of quarter score, McGill, 1; Lasalle, 0.

Third Quarter—McGill shot, thrown by referee; Vickerson held ball between legs to the bewilderment of the Lasalle players. Kyle sent ball to goal bar at free throw. Gills shot wild. Vickerson swam up along side of tank and scored by neat shot. Scrimmage at centre, Lasalle shot, went wide. Moore scored by shot after wrestling with Lasalle man for ball. Ball tossed about. Brooks stopped shot. Vickerson scored after swim down side. McGill, 4; Lasalle, 0.

Up to this time the McGill men had a decided edge on their opponents. Here they tried the criss-cross plays to waste time. Lasalle ball. Moore shot wild. Brooks shot s-w-i-t ball from centre and scored. McGill got ball, passed back to goal and worked criss-cross play. Lasalle shot stopped. McGill shot from side stopped. Brooks shot stopped. Scrimmages in front of McGill goal cleared by shot to centre by Forsythe. Brooks shot from centre stopped. Scrimmage in front of McGill goal; Giles scored into empty net. Ball passed from one end to other. Brooks secured and shot fast ball from centre and scored. McGill, 4; Lasalle, 3.

The line-ups were as follows:

Lasalle.	McGill.
Goal.
Turner	Jardine
	Defence.
Bowden	Forsythe
Urquhart	Phipps
	Forwards.
Giles	Moore
Brooks	Vickerson
	Centre.
Drummond	Kyle

What did you do last evening.
Why, absolutely nothing at all.
Well, then, how did you know when to stop?—Gee Bee Record.

DEBATE SCHEDULED FOR NOVEMBER 8th

Prof. Latham and Mr. Noad to Judge

26 of displaying its oratorical powers at the first elimination debate which takes place in room three of the Arts Building on Wednesday, November 8, at 5 p.m. sharp.

Two debates will be held on this date. The affirmative side of the resolution "That capital punishment is necessary for the upholding of moral law" will be represented by H. E. Novick and B. Copple, whilst W. F. Shepherd and D. C. Monroe will do their best to prove the falsity of the statement. "Resolved, that it is injurious to the welfare of the home that women should enter into business competition with men" forms the subject of the second debate. Against R. Tennant and T. White, the affirmative men, are pitted A. Newman and C. Watson.

Professor Latham and Mr. Noad have kindly consented to act in the capacity of judges at these debates, to which it is hoped the class will turn out in masse.

The value and importance of these debates cannot be over-estimated. They provide a unique opportunity for all men in the class to become proficient and confident in debating and public speaking. These debates will form, as well, the basis for selection of men to represent the class in the Intercollegiate Debating League, whose work commences early next week.

AT OTHER COLLEGES

Mills College at Oakland is starting an endowment campaign for two million dollars which must be raised by 1923. Every undergraduate has taken a cardboard ruler one foot long which is to be filled with dimes by October 17. Interest is considerably increased by class rivalry.

Mental capacity of all new students at the University of Idaho will be catalogued this year by a series of intelligence tests to be given by the Psychology department. About 150 students will be examined daily until the list is completed. The tests will be comprehensive enough to permit evaluation of the possibilities of each student and his ability and capacity for learning.

Comparison of the enrollment figures recently published by Princeton, Harvard, and Yale, show that, including both graduate and undergraduate students, Harvard leads the three with a grand total of 6,225, a margin of more than 2,000 over Yale, who is next with 4,076 enrolled for the year. Princeton, with a total of 2,367, is last, owing to the fact that there is but one graduate school in the University, while Harvard and Yale have many graduate departments.

Ohio State students and alumni contributed $1,083,000 to make possible the erection of Ohio State's new stadium, which was dedicated October 21, when Michigan invaded the home territory of the Buckeyes. The campaign was begun in 1920, because of the utter inadequacy of Ohio Field, which was built when the enrollment of the institution was scarcely 2,000, while last year it was very near the 8,000 mark. The new structure, which is built on the U shape plan, seats 62,110, and 10,000 more can be accommodated by building temporary bleachers across the open end. Closest seats are 72 feet from the sidelines, farthest seats are 231 feet. Eighty-three entrances are provided, and the circumference from end to end is one-third of a mile.

Matinee dances are held at Idaho University and at the same time reports are received by play from their football team while it is on foreign fields.

R.V.C '23 MEETING HELD YESTERDAY

At a class meeting of R.V.C. '23, held yesterday, the class fee for the coming session was fixed at fifty cents. The treasurer, Miss Roy, would like everyone to pay this as soon as possible; also the Daily fee of $1.50.

Miss Joan Foster and Miss Lorna Kerr were chosen as debaters for the coming Junior-Senior debate.

NEED MORE COLLEGE MEN OF RIGHT SORT

What the country needs to-day is not fewer college men, as some educators have recently advocated, but more college men of the right sort. This is the opinion of Prof. Archibald L. Bouton, Dean of the College of Arts and Pure Science of New York University.

Professor Bouton pointed out that large numbers of men were being trained for the professions today whose morale was distinctly lower than those of the past. Many of these are more interested in the materialistic aspect of their work than in fulfilling the service required of them by society.

"The rush for profession training," said the university dean, "is not accompanied by a zeal for the real ground-work which the profession requires. Their aim is for a short-cut. That would explain the fact that today it is easy to fill a profession school for commerce or law or medicine or dentistry. It isn't easy to prevail upon those who seek these fields to lay the proper foundation for their work in culture training."

"Of that sort there are certainly too many. But of the technically trained or the professionally well-grounded, of those we haven't anywhere near enough, nor are we within gun-shot of getting them."

"The universities are not entirely free from blame for this condition. Instead of holding out the ideal of service to their students and standing firmly by their requirements for fundamental training, they are yielding to the demand for short-cuts to purely technical and vocational training."

Professor Bouton instanced the decline of the study of Latin and Greek, which he holds as the cardinal factors in the education of any cultured man, as evidence of the universities' inclining to the materialistic demands of many of their students.

"I don't believe that too many men are going to college today," said the dean. "My opinion is that in this country, we haven't enough of the higher disciplined thinking. We have not reached the point as yet when we can begin to restrict the number. "We need more trained men in every phase of professional and individual life, as well as in political and social life. But we must select from the number applying those whom we think are properly fitted to carry on their obligations to the state body."

"Our efficiency is not at best, which it must become if our universities and colleges are going to perform their proper services to the state."

"It is quite possible, however, that there are some men at college who shouldn't go there, and some who aren't going who should go."

HOW TO GET BY

Getting by, is a slang expression for "Making the Grade," or "Cutting the Buck." It is one of the chief problems of both the male and the female at this College. Any poor Boob can accomplish the feat by hard study, but it takes a real He-Man or She-Woman with genuine latent ability to get by on his nerve alone. Of course, there are as many different methods of kidding the faculty along, as there are styles of eating Chinese Noodles; but a few of the best ideas are common to them all.

For Co-eds I suggest the following campaign: First of all, bob your hair, wash your teeth, paint your face, roll your socks, and practice smiling like Helen of Troy. Second, impress your superiority on the professor by disregarding any instructions they might carelessly give you. If anyone of the faculty dares to suggest that you study, freeze him with one glance and turn your back. Whatever you do, don't condescend to argue the matter. At the end of the term, go directly to the Dean of your college and invite him to dinner. If after taking these precautions, you flunk, your case requires a Beauty Specialist.

The men, and "would-be" men are advised to follow these instructions. Assume a bored expression during lecture, and lead the professor to think that you knew the stuff years ago. Then when he asks you to divulge your knowledge at an examination, wrap your pen hand in your handkerchief and register exquisite agony every time he looks at you. If anyone gets sarcastic, throw him out the window, or if discretion seems to be the better part of valor, just smile sadly. At the close of the term, look up a good Bootlegger and buy the Dean a case or so. If you flunk in spite of these efforts, buy a ticket home, for you must be lacking in even the veriest essentials.—Daily Californian.

ORIGIN OF OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE

Dr. Mansbridge Lectured at the Lowell Institute

In mediaeval days students of all ages boys as well as men, attended the universities. Lack of means was no obstacle. If they had to share a bed and even a cloak one with another, it did not matter, so long as they were at the goal of their desire. The student changed city, university and country as he pleased. He made his own laws and conformed to the custom of his kind. They were a wild and motley crew. "Wherever Clerks are met together," said Friar Roger Bacon, "as happens at Paris and Oxford, they shook the world with their feuds, their contentions, and their vices."

This was a glimpse of the personal side of the days when learning was indeed a passion, as presented by Dr. Albert Mansbridge, of England, who began a course of eight lectures on "The Older English Universities" at the Lowell Institute. "The Mediaeval University" was his topic, the discussion centering upon the Origin of Oxford and Cambridge and the spirit which dominated learning up to the time of the Reformation.

Dr. Mansbridge has devoted many years to university research work and has discovered much detail in the beginnings of public education, long enshrouded in hitherto inaccessible archives. As he took his place at the speaker's table he held a book containing the lectures of William Everett, given under the auspices of the Lowell Institute in 1864, all devoted to Cambridge University. Never before or since had a Lowell Institute lecturer discussed that topic. Dr. Everett apologized, to the extent of three or four pages, the speaker said, before venturing to begin his presentation. The apology that Dr. Mansbridge wished to make was not directed at the subject assigned to him, but to the possibility of his using words that might prove unfamiliar to their pronunciation. It was the first time he had ever appeared before an audience in this country, and he was happy to be "in the kindest of all towns in the United States—Boston."

Departing from established form, the speaker informed his audience that he would welcome suggestions as to try to serve the people who attended, not himself. The material was astonishingly abundant, and he had only eight lectures to give. Though he was obliged to stop promptly on the hour—even if in the middle of a sentence—he would remain on the platform as long as necessary, after each lecture, to answer questions. When the lecture was finished he stepped to the rear for a chair, and placing it near the edge of the platform remained sitting for fifteen minutes, at least one-third of the audience remaining for the opportunity to converse with him.

Dr. Mansbridge said that nobody knows the manner and method of the birth of the University of Oxford, now generally admitted to be the elder twin of Cambridge. Though he had searched the records for years, he had discovered none that fix the date indisputably. In a pardonable desire to shine before Elizabeth, a public orator declared to her that "all histories with one voice testify that the Oxford University borrowed from Cambridge its most learned men . . . and that Paris and Cologne were derived from our university." Whatever Paris may have thought, remarked the speaker, "Oxford could ill brook so dogmatic an assertion. Her sons could imagine quite as much as any Cambridge orator. So there began what Maitland described "as the earliest of all inter-university sports"—a dong-dong lying match.

In one respect, Dr. Mansbridge admitted, Cambridge held the advantage for a fortress existed there some thousand years before Oxford under Edward the Elder, became a fortified town in 912 A.D., but for the rest, it is possible that the students from Paris who were expelled by royal mandate, sought refuge in England in the twelfth century and settled chiefly in Oxford.

The earliest English schools were naturally enough the creations of ecclesiastics. Oxford had risen around the monastery of St. Frideswide, but Cambridge was remote from the Abbey of Crowland or the monastery at Ely, and so monks had to be sent to her. Early in the twelfth century Jeoffrey of Orleans, Abbot of Crowland, sent his monks, and in doing so may perhaps have been the pioneer of Cambridge. All this time Oxford was developing, the influx from Paris being sufficient to impose the organization of the French University upon the growing school of St. Frideswide. No one knows who the students were. The first recorded name at Oxford is a Nicholas, a Hungarian. The most prominent scholars of the time seem for the most part to have graduated at Paris.

Mr. Hill, of the Indianapolis News, evidently does not rate us very highly, judging from the adjectives he used, but he is due for a surprise one of these days," said the Peardue Exponent.

COSMOPOLITAN CLUB TO MEET

At Strathcona Hall This Afternoon

The Cosmopolitan Club will hold its first meeting for this session at 5 p.m. today in Room A of Strathcona Hall. As its name signifies, it is composed of all nationalities and creeds. Its object is to get the different elements into touch with one another, to promote good-fellowship among them, and above all to get them acquainted with British traditions and customs. Canadians are especially urged to join if this object is to be fully realized. Moreover, the opportunity of meeting broad-minded fellow-students from every part of the world is in itself educational. In the course of its meetings a member will be called upon to read a paper on any interesting features of the country he comes from. Free discussions will also be held on political questions. Everybody is cordially invited to attend the first meeting.

WOMEN IN PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Those who view current events as marks on the gauge of history have found food for thought in the announcement of the appointment of a woman to the United States senate. Also it has started some argument among these same philosophers.

The particular appointment is of academic interest only perhaps, as the new senator is 87 years old, and her term of office, and prerogatives, will expire with the election day on which the governor who named her seeks the same office.

But even a nominal senatorial incumbency for a woman gives the historiographers ground for renewed research. There seems to be no dispute as to the place which woman's ascendancy occupied on the barometers of civilization in former ages. Woman's ascendancy in public affairs has almost invariably been coincident with the decline and fall of the nation in world influence. The unfortunate fact that the nations of the ancient world carried their records with them in their falls has left historians only a few fragments of information to work with. But regarding those nations whose records remain, there seems to be no question. That's one side of it, anyhow.

Greece and Rome climbed to the pinnacles of world power and influence, then fell. Their decline were characterized by the emergence of the woman from the home and her activity in public affairs. The nations which sprang up following the barbarian overrunning of Europe experienced the same development. Spain and the various Italian republics of the middle ages also are cited as examples pointing in the same general direction, but not anywhere near so emphatically.

While there is practically no dispute among students of this business as to the place on a nation's road from vigor to decay, at which woman's ascendancy in public affairs may be expected, there is considerable question and much argument as to whether the fact may be considered as a cause or a symptom of approaching decline in national strength.

Those who maintain the former contention argue that the departure of the woman from the home is the fundamental cause of the weakening of the national fibre. With her attention withdrawn from the training of children, they insist that family life must fail. And without family life, everyone must admit that there can be little to argue for the state.

Persons who insist that woman's ascendancy in public affairs is merely a symptom rather than a cause, maintain that woman's entry into the administration of affairs outside of those of her family comes only because man has failed in his task. And man's failure at public administration must have come, they argue, because the nation's decay has already set in.

There is small comfort for the philosopher in either explanation, but it may be taken for granted that most women will insist upon being called causes, rather than symptoms.

Then there is the third school, which holds that proper participation of women in public affairs really constitutes a guarantee of the life of the nation.

Probably none of us will live long enough to see the complete demonstration as to which theory is most nearly correct in the cause of our own nation.
